St Paddy O'Burns Night Supper/Party™

It was a sad day for Scottish Rugby supporters among the enthusiastic crowd who turned out for the St. Paddy O'Burns Night Supper/Party™ or SPOBNSP.com as our village stock market guru, Derek Borrill, would urge us. But that doesn't stop them from having a good time. No Sir. And in a gesture of togetherness with their Irish cousins a double celebration was planned! And it was good.

Once again, Maxey's best dressed Scotsman of the Night Award went to Douglas Hutchison, our genial Haggis stabber for the evening. Duly 'killed' the Sweeney's of Glasgow Haggis (& Vegetarian option) was served with claptrap (a mix of neeps & tatties, to you and me) in the forward lounge.

This year our esteemed landlord Adrian managed to conjure up an Irish Folk band who somehow had survived the Real St Patrick's Night the day before and were still up to giving Maxey's finest a great mix of jigs, reels and other songs from the emerald isle. If anyone has details of the band can you email me (editor@maxey.co.uk) so that I can give them a name check. I was in no state to remember anything last Saturday Night.

As usual our celebratory excesses have a serious undertone. Ticket sales and other raffle collections raised a further £250 for Macmillan Cancer Relief.

Party goers were treated to a pickup band of talented musicians who played an eclectic selection of traditional songs, jigs & reels.
